

hey there is no need to have the government putting their hands into yet another perfectly fine service. I pay for this service and enjoy having it at my disposal. where else can i get info about local weather and traffic when i travel, at the touch of a button. if i did not have this i would have to search through many stations waiting to find a traffic report, in which case it may be to late to avoid a traffic jam,before i found a station to warn me. i feel the fcc needs to look at what is best for the PAYING public that subscribes to the service and not make a decision due to a certain group spending money to persuade the fcc. xm is the wave of the future and change is always questioned, but this hurts no one except in the NAB's back pocket.
